One of these brave skydivers is Wilmington native and Wilmington High School graduate, Paul Quandt. Paul's latest fall to Earth was over Spain during a skydiving championship that was held in the last week of July.

Wilmington man falls to Earth - again...and again!

By SHAWN P. SULLIVAN

WILMINGTON - You stand as firmly as you can in the open doorway of a plane soaring thousands of feet above solid ground. A parachute is strapped to your back, goggles hug your eyes, and a jumpsuit cloaks your body. An endless parade of scenarios, ranging from the planned to the unplanned, which, of course, is a kinder way to characterize an emergency, rushes through your pumped imagination. Once you're officially within the drop zone, you leap from the plane into a vast pit of tyrannical winds whipping fiercely around you. You plummet to the earth below, with outstretched arms and legs and, if you're Wilmington native Paul Quandt, a smile on your face.

"The great thing about skydiving is that every jump that you make is unique," says Quandt, who graduated from Wilmington High School in 1985 and now lives in Groton.

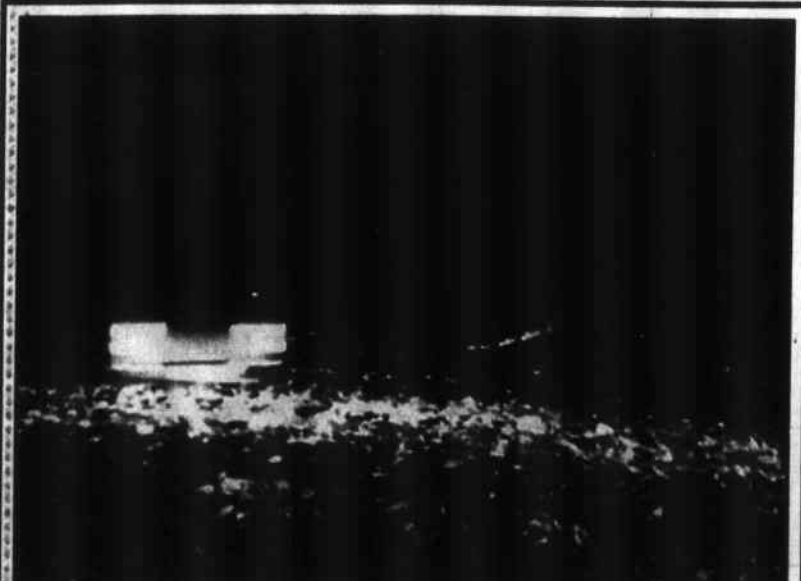

He ought to know. Quandt first jumped out of a plane when he was a student at UMass Amherst in 1986, and he has been high on heights ever since. In fact, in the past 15 years, he has jumped from a plane approximately 4,000 times. He is, quite literally, the kind of guy who, if told to jump, would smile

The Great Fish Scraps Accident

One of the strangest accidents that ever occurred in Wilmington took place on Friday the 13th of October, 1967. If the story were to be told at the annual meeting of the Liars Club of Burlington, Wisconsin, the teller would probably win first prize. But the story is true.

GO FISH. It wasn't a children's card game when tons of fish flopped onto Route 93 in October of '67. It was a Friday the 13th! In case you don't recognize it, that's a 1964 Ford whizzing by. (Photo by Capt. Larz Neilson)

Wilmington for many years had to endure the odors of a catfood factory.

The factory had originally been located on Eames Street in Wilmington, and was known as Murphy's. Residents of the neighborhood, sick of the odors, mounted a drive and had the factory driven out of town.

Murphy, however, did not give up easily. He relocated his business to Woburn, only 50 yards over the Wilmington line. Woburn would get the taxes, and South Wilmington would still get the smell and the traffic.

The catfood factory remained on New Boston Street for some 50 years. The building is still there, but has been developed into some industrial offices.

In 1967, the catfood factory was run by Usen Canning Company. Every day, a ten-ton truckload of fish scraps would come up Route 93, headed for Usen. The scraps came from the Boston Fish Pier and were the main ingredient used in making Tabby Cat Food. The load was messy, sort of liquid with various fish parts. The truck was not unlike a dump truck. The body was a large steel tub, leakproof, but open on the top.

At 6:45 p.m., the truck was in the second lane, headed north, approaching the Route 129 exit. Just before he went under the West Street bridge, the driver signaled for a lane change. He began to ease the ten-ton truck into the right lane for the exit.

In his "blind spot" on the right was a Volkswagen. The driver of the bug leaned on his horn and passed the truck on the right. The driver had to swerve sharply to the left to avoid the VW, which sped off into the gathering darkness.

It is one thing to change the direction of a VW, and entirely another matter to change the direction of a truck. And if the truck happens to have a liquid load of ten tons of fish scraps, that load will not turn quickly. The fish scraps slapped against the side of the truck like so much water, and the impact knocked the truck right over on its side. The fish scraps poured out all over the highway - ten tons of oily fish scraps, all over the northbound lane of Route 93, right under the West Street bridge.

Both state and Wilmington police were soon on the scene, along with the Wilmington ambulance. Nobody was injured, and the big truck had slid off the highway.

The only problem was the fish blocking all four northbound lanes. And it was a problem.

Trooper Warren Bailey of the State Police called the Wilmington Fire Department and asked for a fire engine to hose down the highway.

Car jacking incident winds through Wilmington

Teens escape; police capture abductors

By MIA CARTER

WILMINGTON - Police from several towns, along with State authorities, teamed up to capture three car jacking suspects in connection with an incident that occurred in the early morning hours of Thursday, July 26.

Wilmington Police arrested Angel Roman, 18, of 146 Woodrow Avenue in Dorchester; Joseph Noe, 21, of 67 Morris Street in East Boston; and a third man, whose information is currently unavailable, after two frantic teenagers ran into the Wilmington police station claiming they had just been car jacked.

"A couple of Tewksbury teenagers were reportedly driving around town, when they encountered the three men at the 'Lil Peach Convenience Store in south Tewksbury," explained Chief of Police Bernard Nally. "It is believed that one of the Tewksbury teens had met one of the suspects before."

The three suspects reportedly approached the white 1996 Ford Thunderbird, and requested a ride shortly after midnight.

"The teens did agree to give them a ride, and they drove around for about an hour or so, ending up in Wilmington," indicated Chief Nally.

One of the suspects reportedly told the driver of the vehicle to make a turn onto Columbia Street, (Wilmington) claiming he wanted to visit his girlfriend. Once again, the teens complied with the request.

The driver then pulled the vehicle to the side of the road in order to let the three suspects out, at which time, they allegedly grabbed the two teens by the neck, brandishing a knife.

The two teens surrendered a gold chain and a wallet to the suspects, before hopping out onto the shoulder of the road.

As coincidence may have it, Columbia Street is a short distance from the police station, so the two youths ran into the headquarters to report the incident.

Nally explained, "We issued an (all-points bulletin) and notified police in the surrounding areas. Moments later, a Tewksbury officer spotted the vehicle on Salem Road in Tewksbury and gave pursuit, traveling toward Wilmington and Route 93."

The short-lived vehicle pursuit ended when the suspect driver crashed through a traffic island, careening into a residential yard at the intersection of Salem St. and Middlesex Ave.

The suspects were not willing to surrender just yet, as they abandoned the stolen vehicle and took off on foot into a nearby forest.

Andover Police and State authorities joined in the pursuit, along with three specially trained K-9

CLOSED FOR LUNCH. Businesses along Main St. might as well be closed for all the business they are doing. Main St. is undergoing a widening and that means one lane open, and one lane closed. Traffic is backed up for blocks and many people who would have patronized those businesses are going elsewhere. Mickey Rooney directed traffic as only two cars were at Wilmington House of Pizza and nobody got gas at Galante's at noon on Tuesday. If you can get to the businesses along that stretch of Route 38, you can be assured of fast, personalized and exclusive service. Fortunately they close up shop before the afternoon rush hour begins each day. (Stu Neilson photo)

Jason Stevenson Memorial Playground

The story behind the park

By STACEY E. STEVENS

Two weeks ago, a brand-new play structure was erected in Rotary Park opposite the new public safety complex. The thirty-thousand dollar play structure, which was designed by Gametime and was installed by the Department of Public Works, is already enjoying its share of use by children of area residents.

The structure was erected in lieu of the park that stood on the roughly fifty-by-thirty-foot plot of land that flanked the previous police station, and was the former site of the Walker Elementary School. The original park was built through the generosity of many Wilmington citizens in memory of a young boy named Jason Stevenson.

Jason was the quiet but fun-loving son of Ken and Anne Stevenson, and younger brother of Jeff Stevenson, formerly of Belmont Avenue. He loved to ride his bicycle and was a frequently participated in such athletics activities as baseball and soccer in the field opposite the Wilmington police station. A winsome blonde, blue-eyed lad, Jason was well-liked and had many neighborhood friends.

Tragically, the twelve-year-old was struck by a speeding motor

Murder Takes a Vacation

If you are a mystery fan, check out the new display and bookmark "Murder Takes a Vacation" compiled by Reference Librarian Terri Boudette. The common theme in all these books is that the crime occurs while on vacation! Make sure to pack one of the following books in your beach bag or suitcase: Murder with Peacocks by Donna Andrews; Death of a Nag by M.C. Beaton; Dude on Arrival by J.S. Borthwick;

Guns & Roses by Taffy Cannon, and A Fatal Vineyard Season by Philip Craig.

True Crime

If you prefer to read true crime stories, one of our patrons recommends Final Confession: The Unsolved Crimes of Phil Cresta by Brian P. Wallace and Bill Crowley. The authors tell the story of Phil Cresta, the mastermind thief who planned the legendary brink's armored truck robbery and countless other heists, stealing more than ten million dollars. In the book's "Forward," Dennis Lehane writes: In Brian Wallace's and Bill Crowley's hands, we are taken into Phil Cresta's world, into the dimly lit streets of Boston before Cheers, a Boston of back-alley deals and smoky bars where, from his motel room headquarters in Kenmore Square, Phil Cresta planned the robbery of impregnable safes, the heists of rolling fortresses with heavily armed guards, the bribing of judges, the creation of a vast network of "ears" who worked the city streets and reported to Phil any potential for danger or for profit. You will find this book on the new book shelves at 364.162 Wal. If it is checked out, just place the book on reserve and the library will notify you when it is returned.

FINANCIAL PLANNING AND DIVORCE

Planning for divorce should start well before a couple goes to court. Both parties should have complete financial information about assets—and debts, accounts, retirement plans, insurance policies and the like to come to an equitable settlement. In addition to a lawyer, it's smart to work with a financial advisor experienced in divorce planning.

When dividing marital property, consider the after-tax value. A home and an investment may have equal market value, but a home that's been lived in a couple of years can be sold tax free, while the investment proceeds are taxable. Same for a retirement account.

If retirement holdings are in an IRA, the tax-smart way to divvy them up is to make a direct transfer from one spouse's account to the other's, as per the divorce decree. However funds are to be divided, it is imperative to get a qualified domestic relations order. The QDRO spells out who gets what, and a retirement plan administrator will demand it before releasing funds.

Seasons of New England

by Stacey E. Stevens

Nature is God's mode of Self-expression through creation
Each Season is unique, and cause for special celebration.

Spring is always welcome after winter's wind and chill
The sight of that first crocus brings a certain childlike thrill.
The fresh and fragrant breezes make you glad to be alive
To see the newborn animals and plant life grow and thrive.

Summer means vacation time and lazy days of fun
Like building castles in the sand and tanning in the sun.
The days are long and hot and all the kids are out of school
With ice-cream cones and picnics and excursions to the pool.

Autumn brings us colored leaves and cold, dark, starry nights
The holidays are on their way, each with its own delights.
The days are getting shorter, soon it's time for apple pie
There's so much going on that time just really seems to fly!

Wintertime brings snowflakes and more happy holidays
We think about the year to come, and how we'll mend our ways.
We gather with our families to celebrate and sing
And, as we're busy shoveling snow, we dream about the Spring!

So let's enjoy God's nature, and its seasons as they pass
Because, here in New England, each one goes by so fast!

Letters To The Editor

A popcorn legend

Dear Editor:

I wish to thank Maureen and you for the wonderful picture of my husband on your front page a week ago.

It is the first time in 20 years he was not making popcorn with his friend, Leo Gittzus, under the Kiwanis tent.

Thank you again.

P.S. I bought six more papers

I won't even bring out the signs ... 'til the next election

Dear Editor:

In July 18th's opinion page, Name Withheld: or the phantom as I shall call them did not take their own advice and move on. I am responding only because they refer to the woman adding up votes on the five candidates and comparing them to the guys who won. He also refers to my standing on the corner again and being a little confused. He claims he did not mention any names in his letter but obviously he read them all and must have seen they were all signed by the writers.

First of all, I was the only woman to write a letter that week. You can refer to my name as it was plainly printed on the bottom of the letter. Now to try some elementary math - add up the losers' votes; compare with either "winner," more townspeople voted for the "losers" than the "winners" had the vote not been split five ways the "winners" would have been the "losers."

As the phantom suggests, I re-read your unsigned letter only to see you have gone from name calling - "quit crying" to "whining" - seems to me you're doing both, but you're free to do that. You seem to be afraid as you put it, "of people banding together as some kind of 'posse, and should be careful." Careful of what? Oh, yeah, the posse chased the bad guys, who were masked bandits and did not obey the laws, written or moral.

You missed the whole point of the way in which the process of appointing a selectman was dealt with, you refuse to see the quick hand draw of the sitting board and you certainly are confused about holding a sign. Lastly you say "you did not sign your letter because you do not need a political party going on in your front yard; it's too small to hold all of you Concerned Participants." My, My, Phantom, I would not be afraid of getting people who are concerned about a process in any town, state, or federal government banding together for the good of its people. If you're afraid of that, and don't support the rights of We the People, then you have joined with those who would silence freedom and that IS something to be afraid of.

My yard is also small, but I welcome anyone who cares and wants support on an issue of concern to come on down, if there's not enough room, we'll move onto the street - I'll make room.

Hey, Phantom, my yard is always open if you would like to mosey on down for some nice, peaceful, non-name calling discussions on issues and facts. We can go over politics, etc. I won't even bring out the signs - well, not until the next election, God willing.

Again I sign my name
Marilyn Cox

People still depend on the food pantries in the summer

Dear Editor:

As we enjoy these warm days of summer that we wished for during the long winter months, thoughts of people in need are replaced by thoughts of ice cream and barbecues.

Tewksbury Community Pantry would like to remind you that people who need help meeting their nutritional needs do not disappear with the last snowflake. Although the number of people who use the services of the Pantry is slightly lower than it was in the winter, we are still feeding an average of 165 people from Tewksbury per month. Your neighbors continue to rely on your generosity to put food on their tables. Here are some easy ways for you to help.

One way to help keep the Pantry's shelves well stocked is to make a small donation of food. We suggest that you pick up an extra non-perishable item or two when you do your food shopping. During the summer we are in need of cereal, juice in unbreakable containers, drink mixes, and canned meats. Food collection bins have been set up at the following businesses in town: Andover Bank in the center of town; Fleet Bank, the library, Market Basket at Stadium Plaza, Osco Drug, Sheehan's Pharmacy, Sovereign Bank and the post office. Larger donations of food can be made at the Pantry on most Friday mornings, but please call ahead to arrange a drop off time. The telephone number is 978-858-2273.

Another way that gardeners can help their neighbors is to share some of their garden produce with the Pantry. Donations of fresh vegetables must be taken directly to the Pantry at 999 Whipple Road. Because there are only three distribution days per month, fresh produce can be accepted only on certain days. These dates are Friday, August 10; August 17, September 7 and September 14 from 9 to 11 a.m.; and Sunday, August 12 and September 9 from 9 to 10 a.m. Please call before you come.

Finally, you can assist your neighbors by dropping some change into a collection canister when you do business at one of our local supporters. These canisters are located at Aubuchon Hardware, Bob's Barbershop, Crystal Country Store, Market Basket at Oakdale, Oakdale Liquor Store, the Push Cart, and Tewksbury Center Mobil.

Helping someone less fortunate than yourself is an easy thing for the whole family to get involved in. Children can help choose a food item to donate when they go shopping with a parent or help pick and bag fresh garden vegetables. (Please remember when selecting non-perishable food for donation that all food must be within the expiration date and packaged in unopened containers that not rusted, badly dented, or otherwise damaged.) Older children can be encouraged to put some of their spending money into the collection canisters.

Whatever method you choose to help those less fortunate you will be helping to make this summer more pleasant for someone else.

Sincerely yours,
Sandra A. Geddry,
President

Kiwanis Club teams up with firefighters to provide

Bike helmets available for only $10

WILMINGTON - Helmets are available to the public at the new Wilmington Public Safety Building on Church Street in the Fire Department.

The Kiwanis Club of Wilmington has again supplied the firefighters with bicycle safety helmets. These helmets are ASNI and Snell approved, i.e., they meet the highest safety standards. They are made by Protective Technologies International and are bike shop quality helmets, as opposed to department store quality and would retail in the $35 range. The helmets are available in toddler, youth and adult sizes and the firefighters can adjust them for proper fit. These helmets are the same ones sold at the Kiwanis Safety Bike Rodeo in May.

These helmets are not just bicycle helmets. They are approved for all similar non-motorized sports and thus are approved for scooters, skateboards, and roller skates (traditional in addition to roller blades). Don't think, "My child is just riding a scooter, he/she doesn't need a helmet." Wrong! Let's keep our kids safe.

As a service to the community the Kiwanis Club is selling these helmets at $10 each - that's at cost. The Kiwanis Club and the Wilmington Firefighters are both concerned with keeping the people of Wilmington safe. Making the helmets available at this low cost is one of the ways they try to assist.

If you or your child needs a helmet, stop by the new Public Safety Building and ask the dispatcher on duty for a firefighter to get and fit a helmet. The firefighters are trained to make sure the helmet fits properly.

Right now is the time when most people are out riding their bicycles in this beautiful weather. Wearing a helmet and teaching your youngsters to always, always wear their helmets is the best way to make sure they use one when they get older.

A cracked or broken helmet should be replaced, as it will not provide the protection that a new one can offer. No one should ride a bike, scooter, skateboard, or roller blades without a helmet. Even toddlers on tricycles and big wheels should wear one. One fall can injure anyone. One does not necessarily have to crash with a car to injure their head.

The Kiwanis Club of Wilmington is a service organization, which provides service to the community, especially elders and children. Among their projects are providing scholarships for graduating Wilmington seniors (WHS and Shawsheen Tech); and, with the cooperation of the Wilmington Police Department, they put on the Bicycle Safety Assemblies in elementary schools and, with the cooperation of the Police Department and Firefighters Local 1370 sponsor the Bicycle Safety Rodeo in May. The club also provides dinner gatherings for the senior citizens, in December at Deming Way and in the late spring at the Senior Center. The Kiwanis Club built the Silver Lake Playground for the enjoyment of the community children. They assist many other individuals and organizations in Wilmington. Regionally they support the Kiwanis Regional Medical Center at the New England Medical Center and Boston MedFlight. Internationally they sponsor the elimination of Iodine Deficiency Disease (IDD) the most common cause of preventable mental retardation in the world.

Membership in the Kiwanis Club of Wilmington is open to any adult who lives or works in the Wilmington area. The Kiwanis Club meets at Rocco's Restaurant at 193 Main Street (Rte. 38) Wilmington Monday evenings at seven for dinner and their meeting.

For more information on the Kiwanis Club, on joining the Kiwanis Club or assisting in their service to the community, call Club Secretary Don Rich at 978-658-5568.

Tewksbury residents view State House from the inside

TEWKSBURY - Keith Rauseo and Bob Kelly of Tewksbury recently experienced life as a State House insider as they participated in the Citizens' Legislative Seminar at the State House. Rauseo and Kelly were invited to attend the seminar by Tewksbury's State Senator Sue Tucker.

"The Citizens' Legislative Seminar provides local citizens an unique forum to interact with state leaders, offering an intimate look into the legislative process at work," said Senator Tucker. "These seminars are critical in strengthening the connection between citizens and their government."

The Citizens' Legislative Seminar provides the opportunity to both observe and participate in the legislative process. Participants were selected from a wide variety of fields, representing both the public and private sectors. Once a week, for six consecutive weeks, 60 participants gathered together in the State House for a three hour period to examine the legislative process. The program is an intensive exploration of all aspects of state government, dealing with everything from campaigning to the budgetary process. The seminar featured presentation by various legislators, including Senator Tucker. Tucker and other legislators also met with participants in small discussion groups to converse about additional issues affecting the Commonwealth.

Twice a year Senator Tucker sponsors local residents to participate in this unique program. Since its conception in 1978, dozens of local residents have participated in the seminar. The next Legislative Seminar will begin in the spring of 2001.

SHAVE & A HAIRCUT ... 500 BUCKS! It was a close shave for WCTV producer Rick Aronofsky when Jim Buckley called in during Paul Cardello's live broadcast of Sports Forum and offered to donate $500 to the American Cancer Society on behalf of the Wilmington Lions Club.

But there was one stipulation. Aronofsky had to let Joe Ryan shave off his mustache on live TV!

Tuesday (July 31) evening they did just that! Cardello had WB56's sports director as a guest when Wilmington barber Joe Ryan showed up, razor in hand, Jim Buckley presented the Lions Club check and everyone had a great time removing the fur from Aronofsky upper lip.

Heidi Aronofsky is battling cancer. The Aronofsky's have taken on the disease as a couple and are actively raising money for the American Cancer Society. (Stacey Stevens photo)

Wilmington man falls to Earth...again!

and dare you and say, "How high?" In general," begins Quandt, "what appeals to me about skydiving is the camaraderie within the sport and the sensation of the freedom of being in the air. At every skydiving center, you can always find close friends. It's fun to be around them during free-falls and during campfires at night when you can reminisce about certain jumps."

Most recently, Quandt found himself airborne in Spain, during a skydiving championship that was held during the last week of June. When Quandt banded together with other skydivers and formed their American team to compete against others from around the world, they created a friendly-skies motto for themselves that reminded them that "it's the journey, not the destination."

"As it turns out, the journey was unbelievable, and the destination was outstanding," says Quandt about his cloud-bound jaunt to Europe. "The atmosphere at the world level far surpassed my expectations. I enjoyed making new friends from foreign countries and watching and participating in some of the best skydives in the world. It was just priceless."

It was also just one of many places that Quandt has seen by way of a bird's eye view during the past fifteen years. On the home front, he has also braved such skies as those over sunny California, arid Arizona, dusty Oklahoma and humid Florida. Once, he was on vacation in Israel, but the skydiving center there was closed, or grounded, so to speak, so a leap from a plane was not on his itinerary. In fact, when he participated in the skydiving world event in Spain last month, it marked the first time that he had leapt from a plane and foreign soil was waiting to greet him.

Not everyone would jump out of a plane, if given the chance. Actually, not everyone would book a flight to a destination as long as cars and boats were still around as alternatives. Such folks would likely shake their head incredulously and simply pass Quandt off as a risk taker, a wild man in the pursuit of stomach-turning somersaults.

Not so. According to Quandt, when he jumps out of a plane and begins plunging to the world below, he is simply enjoying life, not seeking thrills.

"I don't consider myself a thrillseeker," says Quandt. "However, I do think it has everything to do with your perspective. I love jumping out of airplanes the most, and this has taken precedence over other sports. I have also enjoyed scuba diving, mountain biking, surfing, sailing, fishing, and just about anything else that's fun to do outdoors. To some, that's thrillseeking. To me, it's enjoying life."

That's Quandt. What about his loved ones, such as his parents and his wife, Whitney? Are they on the ground, looking up, biting their nails and crossing their fingers and hoping that his feet connect swiftly with the ground? Naaaaah.

"My family is very supportive," beams Quandt. "They have helped me with fundraising and selling tee-shirts related to my jumps."

In fact, even the folks at Creoscitex, where Quandt works as a product support manager, have been behind him every step of the way.

Says Quandt, "They were very flexible with my vacation time, which allowed me to follow a certain practicing schedule in the weeks that led to the World Air Games in Spain. I've been overwhelmed with congratulations since I returned."

There you are again, strapped with a parachute, wrapped with goggles, adorned in a jumpsuit. Around you, mere inches beyond the wide open door of your speeding plane, are crosswinds waiting to sweep you up and make an earthbound feather out of you. Moments before you lunge into thin air, you look downward with a gaze that takes you 13,000 feet to civilization below.

Smile. Gravity awaits you.

It's not a crime
for a man to fish and golf all summer long

However, we've heard that wives are gathering at the capitol to pass a law to that effect! So come see us. We'll send you home with the gift that keeps you legal, and lets her know you're thinking of her even as you're sinking another birdie putt.

way. Lt. George Cushing pointed out that a mixture of fish oil and water is just about the slipperiest thing there is.

Bailey had to agree with Cushing. So instead, he called for snow removal equipment, from the Mass. Dept. of Public Works. For 24 hours, the state trucks plowed fish and scattered sand on the highway, from the West Street bridge to the Route 62 interchange, five miles to the north. Autos were able to make their way through the slithering pile of fish scraps, but then they left morsels of fish all along the superhighway.

As fast as the pavement was sanded, it had to be sanded again. It was dangerous, driving along that highway, and many a motorist had a tale to tell when he got home, how the rear of his car just slid around.

It was the worst traffic tie-up in years on Route 93. The traffic jam extended over five miles to the south, beyond Route 128. State Police worked over three and a half hours to untangle it.

No one knows just how many secondary accidents occurred on that fish-slicked highway, but Trooper Bailey reported one four-car collision and three three-car accidents.

The two car collisions - he just didn't know. There were, he said, at least 11, and probably a lot more. And one of those three-car accidents also involved a VW Bug. It happened down near Route 128, five miles from the accident itself.

This Bug didn't get away. It was caught right in the middle, right between two larger cars. It was, one witness said, a perfect "Bug sandwich."

Yankee Magazine later ran a cartoon on the accident in their "Yankee Tintinabulations" page. It showed a cat in a phone booth, calling his friends. "Get down here!" he said. "It's great!"

units. Authorities reportedly surrounded and cornered the suspects in the wooded area behind several homes and bordering Route 93, where they eventually surrendered.

"I think they gave up once they saw the dogs!" added Nally.

The three men are now facing charges of car jacking a vehicle while armed, assault and battery with a dangerous weapon, unauthorized use of a motor vehicle and armed robbery.

Noe and Roman were ordered held on $2,500 and $1,500 bail, respectively.

The third unidentified suspect was held without bail per request of probation officials.

Diversification among value and growth makes good sense.* It can help you seize potential opportunities and may reduce the negative impact of any investment style's periodically falling out of favor. But when the market was strong, diversification didn't seem quite as important. As a result, you may have found yourself overweighted in growth during a turbulent time.

Andover Chamber Music 2001-2002 concert series

ANDOVER - The Andover Chamber Music Series has announced its 2001-2002 concert season - the most ambitious yet, according to artistic Director Julia Scolnik. Following a successful inaugural season at the Rogers Center for the Arts, North Andover, Scolnik has again selected a collection of magnificent compositions and a roster of incomparable chamber musicians. Now in its fifth season, the ACMS continues to offer world-class chamber music to communities north of Boston in an easily accessible, intimate, and acoustically perfect setting.

The opening concert of the new season, Magnificent Mozart, is a spectacular combination of some of Mozart's most exquisite concertos. On Saturday, Sept. 22 at 7:30 p.m., Elizabeth Ann Larson, violin, Randall Hodgkinson, piano, and Jayne West, soprano, will join the ACMS chamber orchestra in presenting Adagio for violin, Piano Concerto in A (K. 488) and Vado, ma dove, o dei. Scolnik will solo in flute Concert in D (K. 314). This is a unique opportunity to see and hear these concertos performed as they were in Mozart's time, with an intimate chamber orchestra playing without conductor.

ACMS entertains families on October 28 at 3 p.m. with a return of WGBH radio host Richard Knisely to narrate Camille Saint-Saens' delightful Carnival of the Animals. The hour long presentation is a tribute to feathers, fins and fur! Children and adults have always been captivated by this musical representation of a coterie of animals. Knisely will guide listeners young and old through this beautiful music as he recited Ogden Nash's whimsical poems.

Scolnik has programmed an enchanting journey through the world of make believe in Legends and Tales on Sunday, November 11 at 4 p.m. Composers throughout history have been inspired by captivating legends and haunting tales, and ACMS will present three of them with a stellar cast of musicians, including Judith Gordon, violin, Irena Muresanu, violin, and Todd Palmer, clarinet, in Stravinsky's Suite from L'Histoire du Soldat, Reinecke's Undine Sonata for Flute and piano, and Maurice Ravel's Mother Goose Suite for string trio, bass and piano.

The fourth annual ACMS Valentine concert is scheduled for Saturday, February 10, 2002 at 4 p.m. Truly, Madly, Deeply is the theme for this season's wildly romantic concert celebrating the music of Johannes Brahms. His beloved Liebeslieder Waltzes and the chamber version of Serenade, Op. 11 in D, will be performed by an outstanding roster of world class musicians including vocalists Pamela Della, David Kravitz, Frank Kelley and Kendra Colton.

The last program of the ACMS season brings the Borromeo String Quartet to the Rogers Center on Saturday, April 6, 2002 at 7:30 p.m. to perform Beethoven's String Quartet in F, Kuhlau's Flute Quintet (featuring Scolnik), and Schumann's Piano Quintet in Eb with Sergey Schepkin on piano. Sense and Sensibility is the title of this concert, when the clarity and precision of the Age of Reason shares the stage with the emotion of the Romantic Era.

Andover Chamber Music Series tickets are $22, $18 and $16, with special discounts for a four concert subscription series. Student rush tickets will be available this year for $8 on the day of the concert. Family concert prices are $10 for adults and $8 for youths 15 and under. The Rogers Center for the Arts, close to Routes 93 and 495, is handicapped accessible and free parking is available. To order tickets, or for more information, call toll free (866) 335-3400, or send an email to info@andoverchambermusic.org. You can also order on line and view additional information on programs and performers at ACMS website, www.andoverchambermusic.org.

Bill help victims of domestic violence

BOSTON - State Senator Sue Tucker has announced that the Senate has passed legislation to guarantee unemployment benefits to individuals who are forced to leave their jobs because of domestic violence. The bill aims to improve workers' safety by reducing incidents of violence in the workplace, and by providing victims with a safety net to escape the abuse.

"Many victims of domestic violence are forced to leave their jobs in order to protect themselves or because their ability to work is impaired," said Senator Tucker. "Unemployment insurance is an indispensable way to help victims maintain their economic independence, and to assist employers in improving the safety of the workplace."

The legislation will grant unemployment insurance to individuals who lose their jobs, either voluntarily or involuntarily, due to domestic violence. Additionally, the Division of Employment and Training will be required to receive training to recognize domestic violence, and victims will be assisted in their search for new places of employment.

Domestic violence is the leading cause of injury to American women today. Nineteen Massachusetts women died from domestic violence last year.

Wilmington Senior Topics

Seniors, are you on line?

WILMINGTON - Recently there has been discussion on new websites, this one you may find helpful. The University of Pittsburgh Medical Center's Intervention Research Center for Late-Life Mood Disorders has announced the opening of a website to help older adults, their family members and professionals to connect with information about mental health problems.

The site, <http://www.latelifedepression.org>, provides detailed information on many common geriatric mental health problems: depression, anxiety disorders, grief and insomnia. The site is maintained by a geriatric mental health team from the center.

In addition to information about late life mood disorders, the site offers links to other mental health resources on the Internet, information on referrals and opportunities to participate in research studies. "There are thousands of sites on the Internet with mental health information, but very few focus on issues for elderly individuals," said Eric Lenze, M.D., geriatric psychiatrist at the Late-Life Mood Disorders Center at the University of Pittsburgh's Western Psychiatric Institute and Clinic. "Fewer still are produced by geriatric specialists," he concluded.

Geriatric mental health problems such as depression are featured on individual pages within the site complete with descriptions, facts, myths, information on common treatments and articles by staff psychiatrists. According to Center Director Charles F. Reynolds, III, "These disorders happen frequently in people over age 60, but they are not a normal part of aging and individuals don't have to suffer without help. The hope is that for those people and their loved ones, this site will provide the information and motivation they need to seek treatment."

Busy hurricane seasons forecast

WAKEFIELD — Scientists are forecasting that hurricane seasons over the next 20 to 30 years may be much more active and destructive.

Stanley Goldenberg, a Wakefield-based meteorologist at the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA) conducted research that shows warmer sea surface temperatures combined with decreased vertical wind shear will contribute to more intense hurricane activity. "When we see this combination, we better be prepared for a very busy period for hurricane activity," Goldenberg said.

NESEC is located at 419 Main St. in Wakefield.

Despite this forecast, NOAA has predicted normal levels of hurricane activity for the 2001 season. Goldenberg noted that while anticipating generally high activity during the hurricane seasons for the next few decades, not every year is expected to be hyperactive. Nonetheless, rapidly increased population and development means that hurricane damage will be far more than ever experienced by coastal residents. "Even weak storms can cause devastating flooding," Goldenberg said.

The Northeast is highly susceptible to damage from hurricanes. Hurricane Gloria in 1985 and Bob in 1991 caused millions of dollars in property damage.

The 1938 Hurricane is considered one of the deadliest hurricanes ever to strike the region, killing 700.

According to Edward S. Fratto, executive director of the Northeast States Emergency Consortium (NESEC) "People living along the coast are most at risk but inland areas can also be affected by high winds and flooding." Hurricane season began on June 1 and will continue through the end of November, but Fratto said, "August and September are the peak months for hurricanes striking the Northeast."

As we enter this peak season, NESEC, a non-profit emergency management organization is offering consumers a free hurricane preparedness pamphlet titled, Surviving the Storm. This 6-page FEMA pamphlet includes steps that homeowners, businesses, pet owners, and families should take when a hurricane is predicted, as well as tips for reducing their risks from future hurricanes.

The pamphlet can be downloaded from the NESEC website at www.nesec.org or to receive a copy of this free pamphlet by mail contact NESEC at 781-224-9876.

WCTV - a home for cyber-savvy senior citizens

By DONNA L. GACEK

WILMINGTON - There's a saying that "learning is a lifelong process" and for six Wilmington seniors that is certainly the case.

These enthusiastic seniors completed the first "Introduction to the Internet" computer class at the new WCTV Media Lab. They learned some computer system basics, how the Internet was developed and how to search for information on the Internet. The students learned about browsers, how to conduct basic searches using "search engines," how to use certain search tools, how to check particular sites and bookmark favorite sites for future reference. During the final class session, which covered one of the most common uses of the Internet - using electronic mail, several seniors opened free e-mail accounts.

For several of the class participants, this was their first time using a computer, and they did a great job! After practicing some newly learned keyboard skills, the seniors became more adept at typing in information and positioning the mouse around the computer screen. They also became more accomplished at locating Web sites of interest by subject and they conducted several searches using typical search sites that were listed on a handout sheet.

Congratulations to the following seniors who successfully completed the class: Edna Ferguson, John King, Kikuko King, Connie Magee, Joseph McCarthy, and Ann O'Shea. Classes are free to WCTV members. The next class, "Word Processing Basics," will be held at the new WCTV Media Lab on Wednesdays, August 1, 8 and 15 from 9 a.m. to 10:30 a.m.

For more information, call Donna at WCTV at 978-657-4066.

Second photographic workshop August 8

By JAKE PETERSON

Are you a longtime resident of Tewksbury with a memory of how the town used to look, long before the population boom?

If so, the Tewksbury Historical Society will hold its second photograph workshop, to help identify old photos, on August 8, and they are looking for your input.

The first workshop held on July 13, was very successful but due to time constraints, not all the photographs were viewed by all participants. The Historical Society is inviting those involved in the last workshop and everybody else who might be able to help identify some of these old photographs, to join them next week at the Tewksbury Library.

According to Beverly Bennett, the Vice President of the Historical Society, some of these photographs are over 100 years old. Most of the photographs were taken by the late Robert Haines and donated to the society by his widow Elinor.

"These are old photographs of places and buildings that we are having trouble identifying," said Bennett. "We would appreciate anyone with some recollection of old Tewksbury to come out and participate in the workshop. The more mature Tewksbury residents might be more able to identify some of these photographs"

The Tewksbury Historical Society

welcomes any donations of photographs that any resident might want to donate and have preserved by the society.

The Tewksbury Historical Society meets on the second Wednesday of every month at the Tewksbury Library and the public is invited to all of their meetings.

Another project of the Historical Society is a recording of World War II veterans and their experiences. Any W.W. II veteran who would be interested in making a video or audio donation of their war experience is asked to contact Beverly Bennett at 978-851-6628, to schedule an appointment for the upcoming project. This project was done some years back but all of the recordings have been lost. Since then, some of the veterans who participated are no longer with us, so this project is very important to the Historical Society.

July 20th Declared Annual Falun Dafa Commemoration Day in Wilmington

by STACEY E. STEVENS

For most folks, July 20th is just another ordinary day. For thirty-nine-year-old Ping Ye and a handful of others in here in Wilmington, the date has extra-special meaning and significance. July 20th has just been officially recognized by the Town of Wilmington as 'Falun Dafa Day'.

Practiced by over one hundred million people in over forty nations worldwide, Falun Dafa, otherwise known as Falun Gong, is an ancient meditative practice that has gained widespread popularity during the last ten years. As opposed to being an organized religion, Falun Dafa, which means 'revolving of the great law wheel', is a spiritual practice based upon ancient Quigong precepts, guided by the universal principles of truthfulness, benevolence (compassion), and forbearance (tolerance). Its set of five beneficial exercises reportedly produce significant, positive results leading to stress relief and overall improvement in physical and mental health. There are no rites or worship rituals, no hierarchical structure, no staffed positions or registration of members. It is free and is taught from person to person, maintaining its original integrity and purity of intent. There are no 'levels'; all practitioners are regarded equally as students. Practitioners are required to surrender neither money, possessions, freedom, nor allegiance to its founder.

Ping Ye, a cryogenics technician who lives and works in Wilmington, first became aware of the movement in 1995 when he noticed a book entitled 'Zhaun Falun' at a friend's house. After emigrating to the United States from Beijing in March of 1998, he became concerned about the plight of his friends and fellow countrymen who remain in the Republic of China. Acting on his concern, Mr. Ye went to Wilmington Town Hall last November to inquire about raising public awareness of this issue by having a special day of recognition within the town. He gave an information packet to the Town Manager Michael Cairra's secretary, who passed it on to the Town Manager. Mr. Ye says that Cairra was willing to listen, and subsequently passed the proposal on to Selectman Chairman Michael Newhouse, who in turn distributed copies of the materials to the Board of Selectmen. Mr. Ye was then invited to make a brief presentation regarding his proposal at a meeting. Because there was no existing precedent in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts at the time, the proposal, while not rejected, was put on hold for further deliberation. When a similar proposal passed on Beacon Hill in February of 2001, the way was paved for other cities and towns to follow suit. After a follow-up appeal to current Chairman Robert J. Cain on July 5th, the Town of Wilmington officially proclaimed July 20th as Falun Dafa Day.

Although at the outset this seems to be just another politically-correct manifestation of multicultural awareness, there is a darker and much more serious side to this story. Since the practice of Falun Gong was first made public by its founder, Li Hongzhi of Beijing, China, in 1992, the number of practitioners has rapidly increased to between an estimated seventy to one hundred million on the mainland (of China), far exceeding the number of officials in the Socialist regime. In 1999, the Chinese government, under leadership Jiang latest statistics, between July 1999 and July of 2001:

- Over 50,000 have been arrested without trials;
- Over 10,000 have been sentenced to labor camps;
- Over 600 have been sent to mental hospitals;
- Over 254 have died from beatings and torture.

According to a source entitled New England SOS Contact Information, these numbers are escalating daily. Included in these numbers are children of practitioners from infancy on up through the elderly. People are being forced to surrender their beliefs and practices, at the risk of being exiled from their schools, jobs, and homes. The Chinese government is to-infested areas, the fingers being pierced with sharp bamboo sticks or the nipples being pierced with wire, public humiliation by being paraded through the streets wearing derogatory signs, prolonged hanging from shackles on wrists, forced standing in physically exhausting postures in ice water or freezing temperatures for prolonged periods, being buried alive, hiding or cremation of bodies, starvation or force-feeding, sleep deprivation, and brainwashing.

Yet, even in the midst of this unfathomable mass murder and mayhem, according to Ping Ye, "A large number of practitioners are continuously going to Beijing in order to peacefully appeal and clarify the truth to their government."

Wilmington resident, Ping Ye, petitioned the Wilmington Selectmen to dedicate a day to Falun Gong.

Zemin, fearing that the greater numbers posed a potential threat to their regime in terms of loss of political power and/or an eventual uprising, determined to nip this fledgling movement in the bud by any means necessary. Their sudden and brutal crackdown includes, but is not limited to illegal detentions, persecutions, and killings. Furthermore, the government is controlling the media through widespread anti-Falun Dafa propaganda, in which the practitioners are made to look as if the so-called 'suicides' or 'self-immolations' that have taken place are of the victims' own volition. These acts are in fact the direct antithesis of the very precepts espoused by practitioners of Falun Gong. According to the enforcing divorces and abortions. In addition to this, millions have been deprived of their human rights, their Falun Gong materials confiscated, shredded, and burned. The tactics reportedly being used include: women being stripped naked and thrown into prison cells with violent male criminals, police-sanctioned assaults, the widespread use of electric stun devices that shock women on sensitive body parts, forced restraint with dirty items such as used sanitary napkins stuffed in one's mouth, forced injections of drugs that damage the central nervous system, the force-feeding of liquid mixtures containing hot pepper, subjection to snake or scorpion bites, being left outside without clothing in mosquiand people, in order to pursue the right of belief and living. Their peacefulness and persistence of pursuing the basic human rights and justice have touched many people." Why are its constituents willing to stand up for the movement in the face of these atrocities?

Because the practice is filling a spiritual void that the government has been unable to address.

According to a statement issued in July of 1999 by Li Hongzhi: "We are not against the government, nor will we be in the future. Other people may treat us badly, but we do not treat others badly, nor do we treat people as enemies. We are calling for all governments, international organizations, and people of goodwill worldwide to extend their support and assistance to us in order to resolve the present crisis that is taking place in China." (At this writing, Mr. Hongzhi has gone 'underground' in New York City.)

Many government and humanitarian organizations worldwide are showing their support of Falun Gong not only by actions condemning China, but also with awards and recognition, including the Freedom House Award and Nobel Peace Prize nomination for Li Hongzhi. According to a recent statement issued by Amnesty International: "We are calling on the Chinese government to stop mass arrests, arbitrary detentions, torture, unfair trials and other human rights violations resulting from its official campaign against Falun Gong." On July 20th, the second anniversary of the Chinese government's suppression of Falun Gong, over 4,000 participants from around the globe staged a peaceful march and press conference at Capitol Hill in Washington, D.C. Similar demonstrations continue to take place throughout the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

States Ping Ye, "I hope the townspeople of Wilmington will support the local practitioners' work in helping to take a stand on human rights...it will mean so much to the people who are under injustice." Citizens are being urged to write to President George W. Bush at The White House, 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue N.W., Washington, D.C. 20500, president@whitehouse.gov, and to appeal to the Chinese Embassy by calling 1-(202)-328-2500. To contribute special skills and resources, including financial, medical, and humanitarian help, contact Friends of Falun Gong toll-free at 1-(866)-343-7436. To locate the volunteer contacts nearest you, dial toll-free: 1-(877)-FALUN-99.

What plans, if any, have Ping Ye and his colleagues made for future Falun Dafa celebrations? "We have no definite plans as yet," replies Mr. Ye. "Perhaps we could hold an exhibition somewhere within the town. We would have to obtain permission the town's permission first."

He is likely to obtain ideas by brainstorming and networking with fellow practitioners in neighboring cities and towns where the practice has already caught on, such as Burlington, Lexington, Lynnfield, Winchester, and Woburn.

There are thousands of websites dedicated to Falun Dafa or Falun Gong.

YOU'RE NOT ALONE

When people recall their happiest memories, they usually think of times when they are surrounded by friends or family or when they felt an intimate connection with another person. Unfortunately, as individuals age, such moments may be increasingly hard to come by. And, many older adults find themselves feeling lonely and isolated due to the death of loved ones. Living alone does not have to mean being lonely, however. Loneliness is a perceived deficit to the quantity or quality of one's social relationships. Conversely, some with relatively few social contacts are not necessarily lonely. Overcoming loneliness requires determination and the knowledge that making a connection with others will most likely happen if you put yourself out.

It may be difficult to seek out friendships as we age, but remembering that one can never have too many friends may put things into perspective for us. At Farmer & Dee Funeral Home, we are happy to assist you in planning a funeral for a loved one, or pre-planning one for yourself. We consider pre-planning to be a loving act, and it also gives the family a chance to have some input in making these important decisions. If you have any questions, please call 978-851-7411.

Silver Lake handicapped accessible pier moves forward

WILMINGTON - Representative Miceli organized a meeting with the Department of Fisheries and Wildlife and the Department of Environmental Protection to resolve some outstanding issues regarding permit approvals for the Rocco DePasquale handicapped access pier at Silver Lake in Wilmington.

Due to Chairman Miceli's persistent efforts, the Massachusetts House of Representatives, in a Transportation Bond Bill last year, approved $150,000 for the design and construction of the Rocco DePasquale handicapped access pier at Silver Lake. Representative Miceli met with Speaker Finneran to ensure this item remained in the conference committee's final report.

When Representative Miceli became aware of the problems relative to the permitting process, he arranged for the two departments to meet to discuss the concerns with the proposal on Monday, July 23. At this meeting, the DEP requested some additional information from the Department of Fisheries and Wildlife. The meeting was very informative and productive. The Assistant Director of Planning and Conservation John Keeley represented the Town of Wilmington at this meeting.

When asked about this issue, Representative Miceli said, "I firmly believe that there is a need for this pier. This project is a fitting tribute to a man who has given so much to the Town of Wilmington, Rocco DePasquale was the Chairman of the Board of Selectmen, President of the local bank, and a well known restaurateur. He was one of the most beloved gentlemen in our town."

The permits still need to be approved, and the project must go out to bid. Since it would not be possible to build the pier in the winter, the construction may begin next spring.

Chairman Miceli said, "It has been a pleasure to work with the town on this project."

Representative Miceli will remain to work very closely with both environmental agencies and the Town of Wilmington to see this project completed as soon as possible.

The story behind the park

vehicle on July 4th, 1985 while crossing the street on his bicycle in front of Wilmington High School with his best friend, Joey Wright. Recreation director Ron Swasey, a friend of the Stevenson family whose daughter was a second-grade classmate of Jason's, recalls that fateful day quite clearly. "I remember hearing the squeal of the brakes as I was setting up for the Wednesday evening concert on the common," he says. "Joey managed to make it across the street safely, while Jason was not as fortunate." Jason was airlifted to UMass Hospital in Worcester, where he survived for just a few short hours more.

Says Anne Stevenson, "This is the kind of thing that happens to someone else's family. You never think that it is going to happen to your own child. While we were at the hospital, we were asked if we would be willing to donate Jason's kidneys to others who were awaiting transplant operations. Numb as we were at the time with shock and grief, we would never have come up with the idea of our own accord. This was a wonderful thing, because it meant that a part of our son would go on living in another human being, and it would at least help us to make some sort of sense out of our loss. There is only so much information that donor banks are permitted to share with you, but we learned that one of the recipients is actually located in London. We believe that the other recipient resides here in the states."

"Belmont Avenue was at that time a very close-knit neighborhood, having a lot of families who had children of the same age bracket. Those folks were incredible, particularly the children. They truly rallied to keep Jason's memory alive. It was devastating for them, because it was their first real brush with personal tragedy. It was especially difficult for our elder son Jeffrey, who was fourteen years old at the time, but he helped us to keep on going. Jason's classmates came to our house regularly to talk about him and to see if there was anything that they could do to console us. We live in New Hampshire now, but Jeff works in Woburn and still keeps in touch with his old friends. Whenever we happen to bump into them, they still come up and give us hugs."

The neighborhood people did more than provide emotional support for the family. Under the direction of area resident Peggy Kane, adults and children alike campaigned from door-to-door, soliciting donations in order to erect a safe neighborhood park in Jason's memory. After many hours of untiring effort, thirty thousand dollars were raised by their endeavors, and a park was built upon the space as described above. The crowning feature of the park was a granite stone commissioned by Anne's brother. The stone bore a brass plaque containing the words, 'Jason Stevenson Memorial Park'.

Like many other cities and towns throughout the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, Wilmington continued to experience a steady growth in population and industry (statistics provided by Kay Scanlon of the Town Clerk's Office show a twenty-one percent population increase during the last ten years). As the number of residents increased, and the Town's demographics changed, both the current and future needs of the Town had to be taken into consideration. In the latter 1990's, various municipalities throughout the Commonwealth began to implement plans for increasing and improving their public safety provisions. Selectman James Rooney became aware of pending legislation by which cities and towns erecting combined state-of-the-art police/fire public safety facilities were eligible to receive substantial compensation from the state.

As an offshoot of a town meeting to discuss these issues, several citizens formed a committee in 1997 entitled, 'Wilmington Taxpayers for Space Solutions'. This group was active in assessing the current circumstances and future needs of the public safety and school buildings.

After doing extensive research, which included walkthroughs and filmings of these sites, notation of current space and other issues, feasibility studies, financial analyses, and distribution of information, the committee determined that it would be more expedient and cost-effective if the town kept the current fire station, erected an additional substation in North Wilmington, and built new quarters for the police department instead. In the end, however, the proposal for the combined fire/police facility passed, and the new public safety building was erected.

Although Town Manager Michael Cairra was in favor of retaining the memorial park in its original space, it needed to be relocated in order to avoid posing a safety hazard to the children during the new public safety building's construction phase. In April of 2000, the Town voted to appropriate a sum of thirty thousand dollars to build a new playground across the street in Rotary Park. In order to comply with the Commonwealth's current safety and accessibility standards, several pieces of the former park's equipment were not replaced. According to Cairra, "The town promised the community that a new playground would be constructed this summer in Rotary Park after the new public safety complex had been completed. The Town has honored its commitment."

The complex was completed in May, and the playground went up in July. The new play structure, which is a much more modern and attractive-looking piece of equipment, not to mention handicap-accessible, has generated favorable comments throughout our community. It's in a safer and much more convenient location, and is free of the former hazards of bees, glass, and pretreated wood splinters. Although it is true that the new play area is smaller than the former park, this is largely because much of the old park's footage was occupied by a basketball court which was used largely by adults during lunch breaks and the like.

Area residents interviewed at random were happy to share their thoughts about the new play structure. "This is our first time here," says Eileen Woods. "I saw the picture in last week's Town Crier and decided to give it a try. Although my son, Patrick, at one year of age is still too young to be able to fully enjoy the park, my older son, Casey, who is two years old, loves the ladder and slides. He calls the dinosaur-shaped structure 'the dragon'. It's also very nice that it's handy to the ball field. I heard that the former park was built in memory of a local boy."

Jason Stevenson, who died in an accident. I don't see his memorial plaque anywhere, though. Perhaps the Town is going to contact the family and invite them to a rededication ceremony. I believe that's the way in which these kinds of things are usually done."

Tina Scanlon, mother of three-and-a-half-year-old twins Siobhan and Colin thirteen-month-old Shailagh comments, "The new play structure is nice, especially since it doesn't have any of that pressure-treated wood. It seems to be geared more toward younger tots than toward older children, though. The old park was a lot larger and had swings and shady trees to sit under. We like the new location because it's conducive to our favorite routine of going over to the little pond

GIANT MAN! No actually it's a small airplane. Art Alfano of Tewksbury routinely flies his radio controlled airplane at a large field on Pinnacle St. in Tewksbury. Alfano flies with the 495th RC Squadron, a group of about 130 pilots. Their meetings are held at the Congregational Church on the 1st Wednesday of each month and be seen flying their crafts on weekends on Pinnacle St. (Stephen Rohrbacher photo) to feed the ducks."

According to area resident Dan Woodbury, however, "Neither the Stevenson family nor those whose contributions had financed the building of the original park realized that the building of the new public safety complex actually meant that the park was going to be torn down. We had believed that the park came under the category of 'dedicated open space'. People were shocked when they learned that there was no line item included in the new public safety building contract budget to replace the former park! By the time we had become aware of this fact, the reconstruction was already in process. It's a hard thing to swallow, our worst lapse being that we didn't pay close enough attention to the details, as opposed to the big picture. Lacking the proper information, the process was virtually taken away from us. Although I hadn't known Jason Stevenson or his family personally, it didn't seem right that this happened without at least first informing the family and the contributors as to what was being done. I went door-to-door in our neighborhood, and over the course of two days had gathered about one hundred signatures petitioning the Town to hold a special meeting about this issue. Had it not been for the petition, would the town have appropriated the money to build a substitute playground? The Town Crier published both the petition and the signatures. Jeffery Stevenson, who happened to be in the area that week, noticed the article in the paper and showed it to his parents, who in turn wrote me a lovely letter of thanks. It meant a great deal to them that Jason hadn't been forgotten by the community after all this time."

"We understand that the Town needed the property in order to be able to build the new public safety facility," comments Anne. "We just wonder why no one in the town ever contacted us about it. There were plenty of people who knew where we were. I also hope to obtain some closure on the issue of the memorial stone which my brother had commissioned. It's more a matter of sentimental value than anything else."

According to Mark Peters of the Public Works Department, plans are in the making not only to add some swings and to fence in the new structure, but also to replace the memorial stone that graced the former park. The process has been delayed somewhat due to the dilemma that the actual land upon which the new structure now stands is named 'Rotary Park', and the wording on the stone's plaque bears the words 'Jason Stevenson Memorial Park', which would pose a conflict of nomenclature. A proposal is under consideration to have a local engraving company manufacture a new plaque bearing the words 'Jason Stevenson Memorial Playground'.

"We think of Jason every day," says Anne Stevenson. He is sadly missed by his family. It means a lot to us that after sixteen years, he has not been forgotten."

Adds Ron Swasey, "When something tragic like this happens, people can tend to forget about it. I'm glad that something is being done for the boy. It's about time."

Angels enjoy fantastic season

It all started back in April for J. Fagone, J. Fredriksen, C. Chartinietz, M. Grasso, M. Wilkie, A. Aalerud, M. Arpin, P. Donohue, D. Johnson, M. Poore, E. Webb, B. Macy, C. Conlon, 13-year-old baseball players.

The first big game was the Angels playing the Indians. Monico vs Fredriksen. Fredriksen pitched a three hitter and the Angels' bats came alive. Doubles by Fagone, and Grasso, and singles by Chartinietz and Wilkie, were enough for an eight to three victory. The team never looked back, and went on to a 17 and 0 run for the season.

The playoff was next. Again first game was with the Indians. First inning home runs by Chartinietz and Grasso with a runner on made it four to zero. Fagone pitched an outstanding game and it became a 20 to 3 route. The Junior Orioles were up next. Fredriksen pitched a shutout. Hits by Grasso, Fagone, and Wilkie led the way to a seven to nothing win.

Yankees up next, nine to two win. Winning pitcher was Fagone, allowing just two hits. Angels swept the playoffs.

This was a terrific season right? Yes, but then the All Star team was assembled. The Tewksbury 13-year-olds played in the Salem, N.H. Tournament which featured 13 and 14-year-olds on the same team.

Our first game in the final round was with the district champs. We won the game in nine innings with some pitching help from Gerry Boyle, Bobby D'Amico, and Ryan Walsh. Our second game was with Salem. J. Fagone pitched an outstanding game, allowing only two hits and no runs; 12 to 0.

Our third game was with the Tewksbury Firebirds, all 14-year-olds. Gutsy pitching from Gerry Boyle and a couple of great hits by Doug Heald and Ryan Walsh, and outstanding defensive catches by Mike Grasso in the outfield and the Firebirds were done.

Then came the final game against the Salem State Champs. Again J. Fagone pitching with a pulled muscle in his shoulder, held off the Salem team with a three to one lead. In the sixth inning we fell apart, committing too many errors and the Salem team was victorious by the score of 5-3, headed for the New Jersey Tournament.

Excellent job, Tewksbury All Stars; you're all winners.

Senior Pony League baseball team reels off 10 wins

After starting off the season 0-4, Wilmington's representatives in the 14 and 15 year old division of the Sonny Robbins Pony League reeled off 10 wins in their next 15 games, for a 10-9 record and a sixth place finish out of the 14 team league.

Accomplishing that run was no easy task, as the Wilmington boys entered the last two weeks of the season with only a 2-8 record. They then finished out with an impressive 8-1 run which included a six game winning streak that propelled them into the double elimination playoff tournament for the league title.

Wilmington's winning ways actually started back on July 14 with a win against playoff bound Stoneham. With the score tied at 3-3 in the bottom of the sixth, Ken Luongo launched a first pitch 375-foot homerun to leftfield to give Wilmington its first victory of the 8-1 run.

Bobby Sinopoli was also a key factor in the win as he pitched seven strong innings, allowing no earned run, striking out nine, walking one and giving up only six hits. Sinopoli also was responsible for knocking in the tying run with a squeeze bunt scoring Kevin Velardo.

Two days later again at home Wilmington hosted Lynnfield. The first pitch that Ken Luongo saw in this game was again smashed over the leftfield fence for a two run homerun. That was all the scoring that Kevin Velardo would need as he shutout Lynnfield 6-0 on five hits, one walk and three strikeouts.

Other than Luongo, contributing to the offense for Wilmington was Derek Montalto, Robbie Riccio, Joe Cairra, Bobby Sinopoli and Andy Berian. While in the field Matt David and Kevin Cole were outstanding on the left side of Wilmington's infield. While the outfield trio of Jon Stark, Dan Reed and Bryant Buck were able to track down everything hit their way.

The only set back in the streak came five days later when No. Andover came to town. With Wilmington ahead 6-5 going into the top of the seventh Jon Stark who pitched a great game to that point ran out of gas and allowed four consecutive singles and three runs to give No. Andover an 8-6 lead.

Not wanting to give up on their mini-winning streak, Wilmington mounted a comeback in the bottom of the seventh. Three walks, rapped around a flyout, Wilmington had the bases loaded. Kevin Cole on third, Dan Reed on second and Erick Pelletier on first. A single by Derek Montalto got Wilmington to within one run, but that was as close as they could get, dropping this decision 8-7.

Traveling to Andover for an important match against the second place Andover Gold team, Wilmington made sure their bats were working knocking out 10 hits and a 7-3 win. Joe Cairra three for four with a double, two runs and two RBIs and Matt David two for three with a triple two runs and one RBI led the hit parade for Wilmington. Robbie Riccio and Andy Berian also had two hit games and Ken Luongo rounded out the safeties for Wilmington.

While Wilmington's bats were hot, Ken Luongo kept the Andover batters off balance all day, allowing three runs, striking out three and walking just one batter. Defensively for Wilmington Derek Montalto had an all star performance behind the plate, while Matt Brander and Andy Berian kept the infield solid. But the catch of the day came on a low, sinking line drive to center, as Lou Insalaco stopped what could have been the start of a big seventh inning win a diving catch to secure the win.

Next up for Wilmington was a travel game to Reading. The team remembered to take their bats as Bobby Sinopoli, Ken Luongo, Robbie Riccio and Bryant Buck each had multiple hit games. Bobby Sinopoli was the winning pitcher in this one, pitching his second consecutive complete game. Sinopoli struck out seven, walked only one, allowed only three hits and no earned runs in a 12-1 win.

Other wins for the boys in blue came from contests vs Londonderry, South Haverhill, Everett and Stoneham. Highlights from those games include a first Pony League career win for Derek Montalto vs Stoneham, as well as a 4-for-4 performance by Ken Luongo and a double double day for Jon Stark. Two saves by the bullpen as Matt David and Kevin Velardo each came on to record the first two saves of the year.

Also playing an important part in the turn around for Wilmington were alternate players Matt Cox, Victor Dellisola and Eric Pelletier. These three Wildcats helped out with pinch running, pinch hitting and defensive duties while being insurance and subbing for vacationing players.

Wilmington's run toward the Sonny Robbins Pony League title started with their first game in double elimination tournament August 1 at 5:30 vs Lowell at Shed Park in Lowell.

Jr. Pony baseball team tops Reading, 5-4

The Wilmington Junior Pony League (13 year-olds) team ended their regular season last week with a 5-4 win over Reading in the bottom of the seventh. Jeff Youngclaus provided the bases loaded single.

Wilmington ended the season with an 11-6-1 record and finished in second place. Andover finished first in the division. Other teams in the league included Lynnfield (three), Stoneham (four), Lowell (five), Chelmsford (six), Londonderry (seven) Dracut (eight), North Andover (nine) and Reading (10).

By finishing second, Wilmington earns the number two seeding and played Londonderry Tuesday, July 31, in their first playoff game. The playoff format is a double elimination.

The season started off with a bang with Wilmington beating Andover 13-2. Wilmington collected 12 hits and played solid defense behind dominating pitching that included eight strikeouts. The team took the momentum from that game and went on to improve its record to 6-0.

In the six game stretch, Wilmington outscored their opponents 66-15. The hot streak came to an end on a sweltering Saturday morning game with Lynnfield at their field. The home team broke a 2-2 game in the bottom of the sixth to win the contest.

The second half of the season started with a 9-7 loss to Andover when Wilmington's comeback fell just short and it was a glimpse of the exciting baseball to come. Wilmington wound up losing three games in the bottom of the seventh; Chelmsford 1-0, Londonderry 3-2 and Lowell 5-4, but also found themselves the winners in two; Londonderry 3-2 and Lowell 5-4. Wilmington also had to score four runs against Lynnfield in the bottom of the sixth to gain a 10-10 tie that was called because of darkness after six innings.

Without a doubt one of the most memorable games was an away game against Stoneham that had them leading Wilmington 12-3 in the third inning. Wilmington put on rally spread over the next three innings that gave the Wildcats a 15-13 win over a stunned Stoneham team.

The coaches and members of the team wish to thank all the parents, grandparents, family and friends who came out to support the team during their successful season. See you at the playoff games.

ANTHONY MANCONI

When Balboa came upon a large body of water, he immediately radioed King Ferdinand of Spain and told him of his discovery. The excited King radioed back shouting, "Where is it, be more specific!" "That's it Sir, it's the Specific Ocean!"

Aunt Nora who was looking over my shoulder as I was typing just ran to the kitchen for a couple of aspirins.

Children have become so expensive only the POOR can afford them.

Blackie Vega is a barber college dropout. He was shaving George Guyette and nicked him more than a few times. He asked George, "shall I wrap your head in a towel?" "Yes! George said, "and I'll carry it home under my arm."

Paul Bruno, the owner of the barber shop told Blackie, "give him a glass of water before he gets off the chair and "CHECK" for LEAKS."

Joe D'Ambrosio said to the pretty manicurist, "How about stepping out with me tonight, a fine dinner, a show etc." "I'm married," she replied. "So what? Just call your husband up and tell him you have to work late." "Tell him yourself" she told Joe, "he's shaving YOU."

I took Kathy out to dinner on her birthday, she told the waiter, "I'll have the Spumoni Vincerelli

Please," Scusa, but where do you see that on the menu?" "Right here." The waiter smiled and said, "Signora that's the name of the owner of this restaurant."

My house must have been built by bootleggers. The FOUNDATION is, STONED, the WALLS are PLASTERED and the WINDOWS all have a PANEFUL GLAZED look. BUT, my family and I are happy here, especially at night when the MOONSHINE is over our heads.

Yanno and Nicky Pettruzzelli of New Deal told me, "America sent a man to the moon and their cousin Mario is going to the sun. "Hey wait a minute," I exclaimed, "the sun is so hot the space ship and Mario will BURN UP!" Nicky and Yanno smiled and said, "Stupido, he's going at NIGHT!"

Tom Ciovacco told me, "Chipper, a refrigerator in Italy is called an, "Ice-a-Box-a".

At 2 in the morning, Kathy shouted, "get up! I hear a mouse squeaking. I opened one eye and groaned, "well, what do you want me to do, get up and oil it.

Skip Cavallaro told me, "an Italian Opera isn't over, until the "fat lady" sings.

Aunt Nora and I agree on only ONE thing, we both HATE Lo-o-ong motor mouth sermons. One morning Father Dennis Nason was indeed extra long and, Uncle John Shea got up and walked OUT in the middle of the sermon. After Mass shaking hands with parishioners, Father Nason told aunt Nora, "I hope I didn't offend your brother?" "No indeed," aunt Nora replied, "One of his better traits is he is a SLEEP WALKER."

Poetic justice in Lynnfield

"Lynnfield is home to a unique talented poet and artist," notes the "Lynnfield Villager."

"Stefanie Sacks of 10 Grey Lane, was recently awarded a Temple Grandin award from the Future Horizons organization, located in Arlington, Texas.

"Stefanie, who has high-functioning autism was given the award for individual achievement in her poetry, artwork, and lecture presentations, which show a way people with autism express what is on their minds, as well as exactly what they are thinking and feeling. 'I always liked painting and poetry,' says Stefanie. 'I can express stuff that is hard for me to say verbally.'"

"She recently began speaking to educators and parents around the New England area, about what life is like for autistic children as well as how to understand and work with them. She spoke at a support group for parents of autistic children, and several groups of parents and educators have expressed an interest in having her speak at meetings during the summer.

"Sacks was nominated for the award by her occupational therapist, Arlene Brenner, who has worked with her for many years, and she was shocked when she received notice that she won. 'I thought it was really great,' she said. 'I was really surprised.'"

"For the past five years, Sacks has worked at the SEEM day care center in South Lynnfield. However, she is now seeking to devote her time to her artwork, poetry and various speaking engagements. Currently, she is in the process of applying to an art program for people with disabilities in Brookline that begins in September. The program works with the participants on their art and then helps them sell it....

"Stefanie is also beginning to make her name known on the Internet through websites and chat rooms devoted to the disease.

"Several different Internet newsletters have reprinted her paintings and quoted her different speeches.

"The Temple Grandin award is named for a Colorado woman who overcame the restrictions put forth by autism, and is now a professor of architecture at Colorado State. Recently, she gave a speech in the New England area and Stefanie was able to meet her. A short time later, she received notice that she had won the award named for the woman.

"Future Horizons is a national autism organization that records and publishes professional papers about the condition."

Truly 'modern' medicine in Reading

"In Colonial times, when church and government were

Riches galore: poetry, health, wealth

blended, Reading was known as the west or third parish of a larger township that included present day Wakefield and North Reading," notes the Reading edition of the "Daily Times Chronicle."

"In those days, people cared for their ill and their elderly at home, with whatever help neighbors could offer. While they lacked modern medical technology, yesteryear caretakers provided their charges with a kind of community (or parish) holistic health care; loving attention and concern, spiritual and emotional support.

"Modern medicine acknowledges the benefits of holistic health care - that is multidimensional care of body, mind and spirit.

"And most of us want that care to take place in our own communities, according to surveys conducted by AARP. In fact, 82 percent of people 45 years of age and older would rather not move from their current home if they need to help in caring for themselves. We would prefer to 'age in place.'"

"The challenge facing us is how to do that, given the modern realities of abbreviated hospital stays, the long-term commitment involved in caring for those with serious illnesses, the financial restrictions of third party (insurance) payments, and the social pressures confronting working adults responsible for care.

"Ready to respond to that challenge is a new, non-profit service, Community Parish Nursing, Inc.

"Launched by Sandra Trainor, RN, long time local activist, 'Community Parish Nursing, Inc. is a professional nursing service delivering holistic health care management to people with serious and persistent illness, enabling the individual and family to become a more active partner in the management of their health and healing of mind and spirit in the face of disability,' Trainor explains.

bond rating, and the good news has town officials feeling like they've hit a home run," notes the "Wilmington Town Crier."

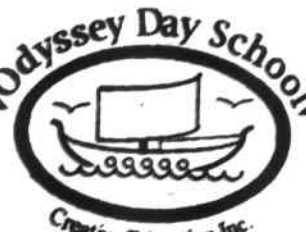

"According to the latest report by Standard & Poor's, Wilmington's General Obligation Bond rating is now listed as 'AA,' which is an upgrade that marks a tripling of the community's previous assessment.

"In 1992, the last year that the Wilmington bond was assessed, the community was rated an 'A' through Moody's Investment Services. This time around, through an assessment made by Standard & Poor's, Wilmington has been given a rating of 'AA.'"

Woodchips From S-2

I visited George Gould and I told him when I noticed the beautiful furniture, "George you have some wonderful antique furniture." "What are you nuts?" he asked, I bought all this furniture new."

Richie Gillis opened a new pet grooming salon. He put a sign in the window saying, "If your pussy is in the mood, bring it in have it clipped, bathed then shampooed."

Okay how do YOU answer the telephone Wayne Higden says, "Joe's Poolroom 8-Ball speaking." If it's a salesperson, Sonny Pearlman says, "Leave your message when you hear the "CLICK."

The O'Hara sisters ask, "who is this calling please?" Now folks how do you end conversation politely. Bill Burton says, "thanks for calling." Jan Levine says, "Too-do-Lo," Tony Stack says, "Call again when I'm not home."

Aunt Nora told, Steve Craven, "One pound of Peanut Butter, please." "Excuse me Ma'am do you mean Peanut Brittle?" "Sonny," Aunt Nora replied with my teeth it's BRUTAL!

Folks I firmly believe, America is the BEST friend the World has TODAY. "God BLESS America."

Tewksbury

reflection of the town involvement. The town also has a very popular teen center with plenty of activities for the younger crowd.

The town offers three golf courses including Longmeadow Golf Club, Trull Brook Golf Course, and Tewksbury Country Club. Longmeadow has been around for over 90 years and Trull Brook was opened Memorial Day 1963. Tewksbury Country Club now occupies the old airport on Route 38. All of the courses offer much to the town and are important assets to the community.

Throughout the 20th century Tewksbury men and women have played their roles in the many wars in which our country has fought. Tewksbury lost three people in World War I, nine people in World War II, one person in the Korean War, and seven people in the Vietnam War. In front of Tewksbury's Town Hall there is a memorial to recognize those men and women who fought and those who gave their lives.

The man known as the father of Tewksbury, Samuel Hunt, was born in Concord in 1657 and settled in this area about 30 years later. In 1725 Hunt and others, petitioned to have a section of land set aside as a separate town but no action was taken. Again in 1729 they petitioned to be set aside and established the Wamesit Parish. One of the provisions in order to have the land incorporated was that a meeting house was to be constructed within three years.

Because no meeting house was built and the provisions were not followed, the town was not incorporated. Had the town been incorporated, what we know now as Tewksbury would have been Wamesit.

In 1734 The Town of Billerica voted that the northerly and northeasterly part of the town be set as a township. On December 23, 1734 Massachusetts Governor Belcher signed a bill making the Township of Tewksbury.

Once known as "The Carnation Capitol of the World," Tewksbury has only a few of its greenhouses left. They were everywhere. Now only a few streets signs remind people of their flowered past, Carnation Drive and Patten Road among them.

Tewksbury's near brush with the Wamesit name evokes many of the other street names, Apache Way, Tomahawk Drive and Mowhawk Drive among them.

It was Tewksbury's proximity to Boston that was the downfall of the carnation industry. The land beneath the greenhouses became more valuable for housing and flower growers sold their farms to developers.

Another interesting aspect of this town is Tewksbury Hospital. Established in 1852, Tewksbury Hospital was originally a state almshouse to care for the less fortunate. In 1900 it became Tewksbury State Hospital, in 1908 it became the Massachusetts State Infirmary, and in 1938 it became Tewksbury State Hospital and Infirmary. In the late 1870's Anne Sullivan, Helen Keller's famous nurse, is said to have had connections to the hospital.

Today it is known simply as Tewksbury Hospital and cares for a variety of patients. The hospital houses some patients that are mentally ill as well as many patients who are in more of a nursing home environment. The building houses the Massachusetts Health Office, a state agency. It also houses an active museum that deals with the history of the storied hospital.

Down the center of town runs the old thoroughfare, Route 38. The major route during the 30's, 40's and 50's for traffic from Boston to the manufacturing city of Lowell. It also provides easy access to many quiet neighborhoods.

Twenty-one miles north of Boston, Tewksbury sits at the junction of Route 93 and Route 495. In the early 60's Route 93 skirted the town and brought industry and jobs to the town. Gillette, Wang, Digital, DeMoulas/Market-basket to name a few settled along the new highways.

The town of Tewksbury certainly is rich with infrastructure as well as open space. This town has lots of activities and offers quite a bit for families and businesses alike.

Anti-identity theft campaign is underway

Postal officials in the Middlesex East circulation area are urging persons to be on guard against identity theft, a growing crime in which thieves illegally obtain a consumer's personal and financial information to purchase goods and services.

The Postal Service is partnering in the "Know Fraud" campaign with the Department of Justice, Federal Trade Commission and Social Security Administration Office of the Inspector General to work with financial institutions to spread the identity theft message in billing statements and other customer contact methods to as many homes as possible.

Joining in the effort to make consumers aware of the growing concern to defraud consumers are: Postmaster Jack Driscoll of Reading, Richard F. Sweeney, Burlington; Donna M. Legro, Wakefield; Michael C. Quinn, Lynnfield; James R. Quinn, Wilmington and Kathleen M. Goodson, Tewksbury, Officers in Charge Lawrence J. Day, Woburn, James Murphy, Winchester and Jeffrey P. Roach, No. Reading.

They explained how identity theft works:

- They open a new credit card account, using your name, date of birth, and Social Security number. When they use the credit card and don't pay the bills, the delinquent account is reported on your credit report.
- They call your credit card issuer and, pretending to be you, change the mailing address on your credit card account. Then, your imposter runs up charges on your account. Because your bills are being sent to the new address, you may not immediately realize there is a problem.
- They establish cellular phone service in your name.
- They open a bank account in your name and write bad checks on that account.

Here are some ways in which you can protect yourself:

- Before revealing personal identifying information, find out how it will be used and if it will be shared. Ask if you have a choice about the use of your information.
- Pay attention to your billing cycles. Follow up with creditors if bills do not arrive on time.

- Give your Social Security number only when absolutely necessary. Ask to use other types of identifiers when possible.
- Minimize the identification information and the number of cards you carry to what you actually need.
- Order a copy of your credit card report from the three credit reporting agencies every year. Make sure it is accurate and included only those activities you have authorized.
- Learn about your rights under the Fair Credit Reporting Act.

Towns From S-3

"Bonds are generally rated by using a letter symbol to represent the financial situation and economic performance of an issuer, which in this case would be the Town of Wilmington. In its jump from an 'A' rating to a 'AA' one, Wilmington surpassed the ratings of 'A-plus' and 'AA-minus' and thus scored a triple.

"How did Wilmington do it?" "According to the Standard and Poor's report, Wilmington's new 'AA' rating is the result of a diverse and growing economic base that is enhanced by the community's easy access to the Boston economy. The report also says that the jump in rating can be attributed to professional town management, above-average resident incomes and property values, and strong financial operations that have yielded a position of manageable debt.

"Another reason for the exceptional rating advancement is the fact that Wilmington has 21,000 jobs and only 11,000 workers. Courting historically low unemployment figures, a large import of workers and above-average wealth levels, Wilmington's median household income comes in at 167% of the U.S. average.

"Needless to say, Town Manager Michael Cairra is thrilled by the good news.

"This rating justifies all that we have been doing and shows that we have a very good manageable debt situation," says Town Manager Cairra. "It is indicative of a lot of hard work by a lot of good people...."

Massachusetts stakes a claim

Which state is the most Irish?

Massachusetts is staking its claim as the most Irish place in North America this summer and fall by launching a marketing campaign entitled "Massachusetts: Where Irish America Begins" to promote Irish cultural activities and businesses throughout the state.

Irish concerts, cultural exhibits, outdoor festivals, music and dance workshops, sporting events and literary activities throughout the year in Massachusetts are features at www.irishmassachusetts.com.

The campaign is being funded in part by a $20,000 matching grant from the Massachusetts Office of Travel and Tourism (MOTT) to the Irish Foundation of Lawrence, which promotes the Irish activities in the Merrimack Valley north of Boston.

"Boston is the capital of Irish America, and Massachusetts is the most Irish state in the USA," said Michael P. Quinlin, President of the Boston Irish Tourism Association (BITA), which is coordinating the campaign. "We want tourists and convention groups to discover the thriving Irish-American community, which is one of the state's best-kept secrets."

Featured over the next six months are annual events such as Gaelic Roots at Boston College, and Bloomsday activities honoring writer James Joyce. The Huntington Theatre is Boston is performing The Dead by James Joyce, while Williamstown Theatre performs Observe the Sons of Ulster Marching Towards the Somme by Irish playwright Frank McGuinness. The Sagan Theatre in Cambridge continues to stage plays by leading Irish and Celtic playwrights like Thomas Murphy, Conor McPherson, Donal O'Kelly and Vincent Woods.

The John F. Kennedy Library and Museum is offering two exhibits entitled JFK and Latin America (through the summer) and Jacqueline Kennedy: The White House Years (through the fall and winter). It also has a solid collection of Irish items from the Kennedy family.

Over Labor Day weekend, the New England Gaelic Association (GAA) hosts championship games in Irish football, hurling and camogie at the Irish Cultural Centre in Canton. The annual Bread and Roses Festival in Lawrence features various Irish groups and exhibits on the Irish of Merrimack Valley.

At 26%, or 1.6 million residents, Massachusetts has the largest concentration of Irish-Americans in the USA according to the 1990 US Census. Boston is often called the capital of Irish America because the city's rich Irish history and political legacy, which includes the Kennedy family and a string of Irish-American mayors who dominated local politics in the 20th century.

A new Irish Heritage in Boston (www.IrishHeritageTrail.com) features dozens of public statues, memorials, parks and cemeteries that tell the Boston Irish story. The White House Millennium Commission named the Trail an official "Millennium Trail" in 2000.

Massachusetts has also benefited from a steady influx of new Irish who have revitalized Irish pubs and restaurants, theater, music and dance. Today there are nearly 200 pubs in Massachusetts, many modeled after pubs in Ireland, offering high quality cuisine and traditional Irish music several nights a week.

Up this year

Vacation lodging and meal costs

vacation travelers this year should plan to add an average of $10 per day to their daily budget for food and lodging, according to AAA's annual nationwide survey of vacation costs.

AAA's survey shows that a family of two adults and two children can expect to pay an average of $223 per day for food and lodging. Lodging rates will average $113 a night up $5 from last year. Meals will cost $110, also up $5.

The most expensive vacations in the United States are in Hawaii, $417 per day, while the less expensive are in North Dakota, $167. Rhode Island, at $280 per day, ranks third, behind Hawaii and Washington, D.C., while Massachusetts is fifth at $276. Meal and lodging costs are based on prices in AAA's TourBooks.

In the last ten years, the average cost of meals and lodgings has increased by 24 percent. That figure is modest compared with previous decades: from 1981 - 1991 those costs rose 105 percent; from 1971-1981 the increase was 167 percent. AAA has been tracking vacation costs since 1950 when the average cost of meals and lodging was $13.

AAA recommends that vacationers traveling by car budget $14.15 for gasoline every 100 miles, based on an average price of $1.71 per gallon and a vehicle traveling 23 miles per gallon. It is also important for families to budget money for entertainment souvenirs and unexpected expenses.

MOVIE REVIEWS BY PAUL FEELY

"Planet of the Apes"

MOVIE: "PLANET OF THE APES"
GRADE: ***

Review: Director Tim Burton attempted to remake this science fiction classic in his own vision, and he almost pulls it off.

Mark Wahlberg stars as a member of a futuristic United States Air Force, stationed somewhere near Saturn when he and his crew, which includes genetically-altered monkeys, apes and chimpanzees, encounters an electromagnetic storm.

Wahlberg's spacepod enters the storm while searching for a chimp's pod that has disappeared, and he is catapulted through the storm, crash landing on a planet where apes speak and are higher on the evolutionary ladder than humans. Wahlberg receives a contact signal from his shipmates, and, believing they have come to rescue him, he sets off to find him, complete with a ragtag group of humans and apes sympathetic to the human rights cause (headed up by Helena Bonham Carter). Along the way he must avoid the evil General Thade (a chimpanzee played by Tim Roth), who is intent on wiping out all those "damn, dirty humans" with the help of his second-in-command, an ape played by Michael Clarke Duncan.

Burton successfully creates a believable ape society, and the actors have the monkey movements down pat. Roth is excellent and downright scary as Thade, and curiously it is the performances as humans (particularly Wahlberg, who is given some ridiculous lines to work with) that are poor and uninteresting.

The makeup is incredible, making the apes in this one much more believable than in the original, which starred Charlton Heston as the stranded spaceman (he has a cameo role here as an ape).

The problem with the film is the ending. Burton spends so much time explaining how everything came to be on this planet, then throws a complete curve at the end that goes against everything he has put on screen up to that point. It's difficult to describe beyond that without ruining the surprise, so moviegoers will have to see it for themselves and decide what they think.

SHORTTAKES

MOVIE: "JURASSIC PARK III"
GRADE: **

Review: No one heads to the theater to see a 'Jurassic Park' movie expecting Oscar-caliber performances, but this, the third and latest in the popular series, is the weakest link of the bunch.

Sam Neill reprises his role as Dr. Alan Grant from the first film, and this time he is lured back to the Island that Time Forgot by a couple played by William H. Macy and Tea Leoni who say they want him to narrate a flyby flight, but who actually plan on landing on the island with a team of mercenaries to look for their missing son, who disappeared while on his own flyby into illegal airspace. Things don't go as planned (as always), and the dinosaurs soon realize that dinner has once again arrived in the form of foolish humans.

Director Joe Johnston, taking over the directorial reins from Steven Spielberg (who stayed on as producer for this installment) doesn't waste much time with superficial things like character development, instead opting to quickly plunk the main characters down on the island. Those that head to the theater interested only in seeing people get eaten by dinos will not be disappointed, but the film lacks much of the charm that the first one benefitted from. The final scene involving the last group of survivors and a pack of velociraptors is also to ridiculous to mention here, and a big letdown.

School Notes

Signed and sealed in Woburn

"While School Committee discussion on the proposed teachers contract dragged on in executive session, it began to look doubtful it would be put to a vote or have a favorable outcome; in the end, however, the committee and Mayor Robert Dever voted unanimously to approve it," notes the Woburn edition of the "Daily Times Chronicle."

"The new three-year pact contains relatively modest raises, 4.4 percent, 3.6 percent and 4.4 percent in each of the next three years, and a few twists.

"The teachers have agreed to phase out sick leave buyback in return for a $375 lump sum annual payment to a 401(a) or 403(b) plan (similar to 401k plans many private companies offer).

"Teachers employed prior to the 2001-02 school year may opt to participate in the plan or continue with the current sick leave buy back plan. New teachers will automatically be enrolled in the new plan. Employees may also opt to contribute to the plan through pre-tax contributions.

"Another major change in the contract includes revision to the teachers' pool, how vacant positions may be filled. Many positions vacated during the year may now be filled at the time with a mini-pool and outside advertising if not internal candidates arise. Seniority will still be given preference. If the position is filled during the year, it will not go into the pool. The exception is elementary classroom positions, which tend to have a trickle down effect of position shifts.

"Also, the teachers have agreed to extend the school year from 181 days to 182 days in the 2002-03 school year and 183 days in the 2003-04 year, and at the high school, the work day has been extended by six minutes to add an additional minute of passing time between classes.

"What seems to be a relatively minor change to the section

All come together: bargain, honor, and plan

regarding teachers' three personal days - that 'personal days are not intended to be used for vacation days,' was apparently a major bargaining issue...."

Diverse and plural in Tewksbury

"John 'Jack' Mallet, of Tewksbury, a professor of biological sciences at UMass-Lowell, was presented a Diversity Award from the University's Council on Diversity and Pluralism during a recent ceremony at Alumni Hall," notes the "Tewksbury Town Crier."

Nominated by Dean Robert Tamarin of the College of Arts and Sciences, Mallet has been a major contributor to the UMass-Lowell K-12 Outreach Program and has provided hundreds of hours of live televised instruction to high school students throughout the UMass Instructional Network and Mass. Corporation for Educational Telecommunications. He has also revised his curriculum and classroom presentations to aid comprehension and note taking for English as a Second Language (ESL) students. His recent efforts involving the Internet have helped learning disabled students, homebound students with health problems and many others.

"UMass-Lowell, a comprehensive university with special expertise in applied science and technology, is deeply committed to educating students for life-long success and conducting research and outreach activities that bring value to the region.

"Second largest of the UMass campuses, Lowell currently offers its 12,000 undergraduate and graduate students more than 100 different degree programs in the College of Arts and Sciences, Education, Engineering, Fine Arts, Health Professions and Management."

Attracting and retaining in Wakefield

"The majority of the School Committee meeting was spent hearing reports from the Action Committees," notes the Wakefield edition of the "Daily Times Chronicle."

"The Long Range Action Plan (LRAP) is a comprehensive attempt by the School Committee to improve the town's education system by defining broad areas of need and outlining policies to meet those needs.

"Most of the proposed policies have a tentative one to four year time frame attached to them.

"The seven LRAP committees are: Facilities, Funding, Personnel, Respect, SPED, Student Achievement and Technology.

"The most discussion arose after Director of Human Resources Steve Welford's presentation for the Personnel Committee.

"With a projected 45 percent of Massachusetts teachers retiring over the next 10 years, the problem of attracting and retaining teachers is one that will be faced in Wakefield as well as statewide.

"I would question whether there will ever come a time when we can compete with Belmont or Wellesley in terms of salary," said Welford, "But the quality of workplace is somewhere we can. And I think we need to put a lot of pride into that aspect of helping people."

"Some of the strategies for recruiting and retaining teachers outlined in the Finance Committee Action Plan were: maintaining consistently competitive salaries with a defined region of surrounding communities, putting more money into advertising for new teachers, providing daycare for teachers with young children, allowing the children of out of town teachers to attend Wakefield schools, and recruitment bonuses.

"You get a recruitment bonus for going to work at McDonald's," said Welford, "You're going to have to think much more in terms of a market economy. That's the way the world works...."

"School Committee Chairman William Chetwynd commended the efforts of all the Action Plan committees and said that the next meeting for all the committees will be held sometime in September."

If you'd like to read about your favorite school, student or teacher in "School Notes," please send school newsletters and other relevant information to Phyllis Nissen, "School Notes," Middlesex East Supplement, Box 240, Reading, MA 01867. We welcome student writing.

Pets & People

by Ruth R. Eisele, DVM

HOT WEATHER DANGERS

Hot, humid days can be dangerous for pets. Overweight dogs, older animals and very young animals can be especially vulnerable to heat and humidity. The extra fat on heavier dogs can trap heat inside the body and restrict breathing.

The immature bodies of younger animals are not yet able to regulate their body temperature.

Older dogs may suffer from deteriorating organ systems, which can limit their ability to cool themselves. And because dogs must rely on panting to cool their bodies - they sweat only around the paws - dogs with smaller nasal passages (i.e., pug-nosed breeds) can have difficulty keeping cool.

Always provide shelter from the heat and plenty of fresh water on summer days. Strenuous exercise should also be avoided.

P.S. If you suspect your pet has heatstroke, seek immediate medical attention.

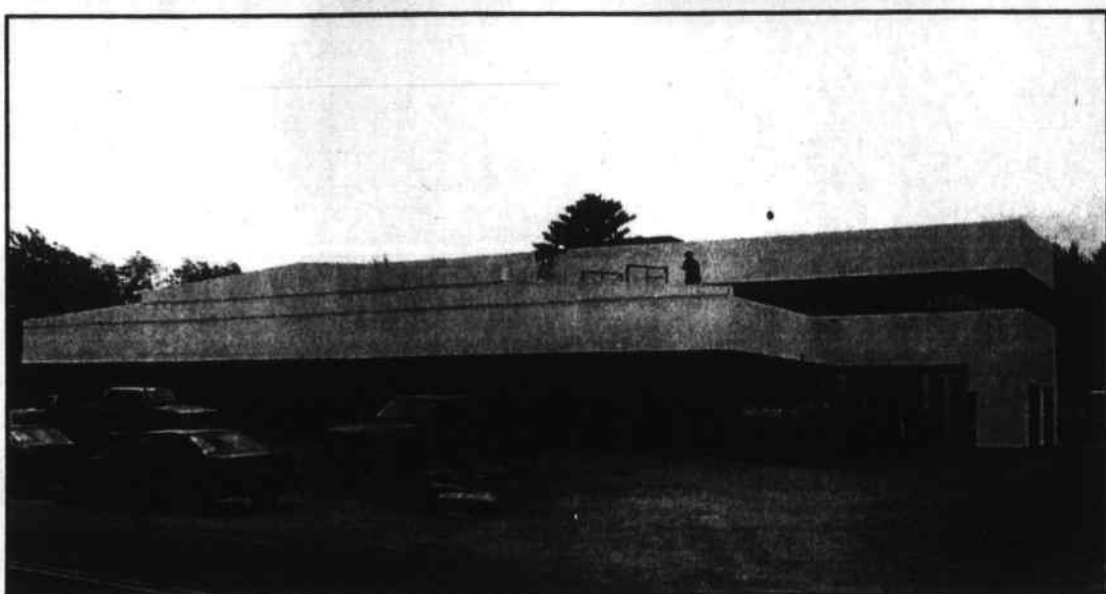

While your dog's body temperature can be lowered by hosing, or by immersing in cool water up to the neck for a short period of time, veterinary assistance is necessary. Full service is available from us at:

SAMPLER

This Week
Stoneham

Great home and carriage house

Imagine a carriage house and a barn in Stoneham! This truly unique multi family home is this week's sampler property. Situated on a large level lot, it depicts pride of ownership with both character and charm.

Upon entering the owner's unit of this well maintained home, you are struck by the open flow of the floor plan. The view extends for 60 feet from the living room through the kitchen to the dining room.

The living room with wood floor and ceiling fan opens to the kitchen.

Warmth describes this galley kitchen with Mexican terra cotta tile floor, oak beamed ceiling, abundant cabinetry, tile counters, track lighting and newer appliances. An island for snacks and meal preparation completes this step saving area.

A dramatically appointed fireplace faced with South Bay quartzite stone sets the mood of this entertainment sized dining room. Bright and airy skylights augment the cathedral ceilings and add to the spacious feeling of the room.

The beautifully renovated bath is totally tiled with a pedestal sink.

The lower level offers a spacious family room with ceramic tile floor, mirrored wall and 12 feet of component closet space. A private home office with a separate entrance and laundry room are also located on this level.

Sun filtering skylights in the vaulted ceilings enhance the charm of the renovated carriage house. This unit features central air, security system, separate utilities and sliders to a private deck.

The 24 x 24 foot barn with a loft, 4 bubble skylights and wood burning stove may be utilized for storage or as a play area. Both the carriage house and barn are vinyl sided.

The large, level lot with fruit trees also features an approximately 275 foot driveway for off street parking.

Situated in sought after Stoneham, this community offers many area amenities and is the home of Spot Pond and the Middlesex Fells Reservation. Its location is also convenient to all major highways.

This property is offered by Steve MacDonald of Coldwell Banker Hunneman Celli in Stoneham. You may make an appointment to view this property by contacting Steve on his direct line (508)982-5005.

Need a home improvement loan?

Every year approximately 26 million homeowners make improvements to their home, according to a recent survey by the Joint Center for Housing Studies of Harvard University. In fact, it is estimated that homeowners will spend $180 billion on home improvements this year alone.

"Home Improvements are generally a good investment because they are a great way to increase the value of your home" said Tom Gamache, Vice President and Regional Manager of the Wells Fargo Home Mortgage Company in Reading. "Home improvement projects can yield returns up to 86% of more, but more importantly they increase a home's comfort and livability."

In the past, there were limited financing options available to homeowners interested in renovation projects if they didn't have sufficient equity in their home. Today's homeowners have more choices, including renovation loans, which were developed specifically for the purpose of helping homebuyers and homeowners finance home improvements.

Renovation loans offer many benefits, including a competitive interest rate, tax deductibility, and most importantly, qualification based on the value of the home after improvements. Because qualification for a renovation loan considers the value of the home after improvements, homeowners may be able to secure a larger loan amount than available through traditional financing options.

There are two types of renovation loans - one for the homebuyers and one for homeowners.

Homebuyers can receive a purchase and renovation loan, which helps them secure financing to purchase a home and pay for renovation expenses. For example, a homebuyer could purchase a home for $100,000 and get the money to make $50,000 in improvements for a down payment as low as $7,500.

According to the joint center for housing studies, recent movers are responsible for more than 25 percent of home improvement spending nationally, even though they represent

Conserve energy and also save money on electric bills

As electricity becomes more and more expensive, you can help yourself, the environment and the economy by taking some steps to conserve power. Your best bet is to reduce consumption, especially at peak times.

According to surveys of the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA), lighting accounts for 20 to 25% of all electricity sold in the United States.

The answer to lowering this figure is to install energy efficient lighting devices. They can have a big impact on your electric bill.

Here are four simple ways that you can save dollars on your bill.

1. Install dimmer switches.

By dimming the lights in a room you use less energy. For example a light bulb at 50% brightness uses approximately 40 percent less electricity. A dimmer switch also extends the life of your bulbs. A bulb at 50% brightness will last approximately 20% longer.

2. Install occupancy sensors.

An occupancy sensor automatically turns lights on when someone enters the room, and then turns them off after the person leaves the room. They're ideal for closets, hallways, the laundry room and garages. All the placed where the lights may needlessly have been left on for minutes, hours or even days.

Wall-switch models are designed to replace standard wall switches, so they are very easy to install.

3. Install motion detectors outside. Many homeowners know that good outdoor lighting makes their home less appealing to burglars. But keeping outdoor floodlights on all night can be expensive. Instead, install a motion detector to control your outside security areas. Motion detectors are programmed to react to body heat.

When they detect the presence of a person, they automatically turn on the lights. They also turn the light off when they no longer detect the presence of body heat.

4. Install digital timers.

If anyone in your family has left a bathroom exhaust fan or a heat lamp on all day, you'll appreciate the convenience of timers and the fact that they can reduce energy consumption.

The latest digital timers are installed right in the wall, wherever you would put a standard light switch. Many come from

Handsome, luxurious and relaxed

The Everheart is handsome, luxuriously large and comfortably relaxed. And despite boasting 4,100 square feet of living space, plus nearly 2,000 square feet of detached garage, the front facade is decidedly unpretentious. Eye-catching features include: stone veneer wainscoting, multipaned windows and a collection of variously sized gables.

Entering, you step into a wide, lofty foyer, naturally illuminated by windows, sidelights and overhead dormers. Art showcased on the gallery wall separating foyer and great room will need spotlighting only at night.

Multipaned windows fill most of the spacious great room's rear wall, and a 14-foot ceiling adds to the feeling of expansiveness. Many families may prefer to use this space as a family room. It's open to the kitchen, with a raised conversation bar marking the boundary.

Working at the L-shaped counter, or the cook top island, you can easily be a part of goings-on in the larger space. The nook is handy for day-to-day meals, while the vaulted dining room stands ready for festive occasions. A built-in hutch fills most of one wall.

When day is done, the owners can retreat to the Everheart's deluxe master suite, and soak away stress in the roomy spa tub. During the day, soft light washes into the bay that houses the spa tub, plus an oversized shower. Other amenities include: a den (or home office), two large walk-in closets, and a private patio.

Two more complete bedroom suites are upstairs, plus a computer loft with a built-in desk. Each of the bedrooms has a roomy walk-in closet plus its own bathroom.

A breezeway links the house to a three-car garage with plenty of extra storage space above it.

For a review plan, including scaled floor plans, elevations, section and artist's conception, send $25 to Associated Designs, 1100 Jacobs Dr., Eugene, OR 97402. Please specify the Everheart 10-440 and include a return address when ordering. A catalog featuring over 350 home plans is available for $15.

only 13% of all homeowners.

"Thanks to renovation loans, homebuyers have the option to consider homes they aren't perfect right now, but could be with renovations" Gamache said, "As Americans housing stock ages, the ability to obtain extra financing for renovation expenses will become increasingly important to homebuyers."

Similar to the purchase and renovate loan, homeowners who want to make improvements to their existing home may be able to qualify for a refinance and renovation loan. This allows homeowners to refinance their existing mortgage and obtain additional financing for renovation expenses. Let's say a homeowner with a mortgage balance of $100,000 is planning renovations that will increase the value of their home to $150,000. In this example, the homeowner may be able to obtain $135,000 in financing, making $35,000 available for the costs.

the factory with pre-set time intervals, and others offer programmable time settings. To use a timer with a preset interval, simply push the button for the length of time you want the fan or lamp to stay on. The timer will turn it off automatically.

You can use digital timers with longer intervals to control your outside landscape lighting.

So, instead of telling your family to constantly "turn off the lights", which seldom happens, consider installing one of these new devices.

They are a lot easier and you may be surprised how affordable they are.
